FATMA FAHMY WINS THE FIRST EDITION OF THE DANIELE TAMAGNI GRANT

Fatma Fahmy, an Egyptian documentary and daily life photographer, born in 1991, living in Cairo, has been selected by an International Jury as recipient to the Daniele Tamagni Grant. Fatma's portfolio has been selected among over 100 submissions from 25 countries, offering evidence to the interest of the industry and the photo community in the Daniele Johannesburg.

PRESS RELEASE

The International Jury says : "We were impressed by Fatma strong storytelling, with images rich of poetry, values, nostalgia. Fatma focuses her attention on societies and communities still holding and preserving their traditional and ancient roots, creating respectful images amplifying such historical and environmental bonds, shining lights over people's lives." Giordano Tamagni , chairman of the Jury adds : " her project is coherent to the spirit of the initiative and deeply connected to Daniele's artistic heritage".

Lekgetho Makola, Head of Market Photo Workshop, believes Fatma represents " the ideal profile for this scholarship, conceived to promote further elevation to the African culture, its creativity, its visual aesthetics and the in-depth exploration of the photography media".

The winning project "Once there was a Tram" is dedicated to Alexandria's 19th century tram network.

About the project, Fatma Fahmy says "...I decided to enter this trolley to explore its inner world, I thought it might be a reflection of its outside world. The stories of people are complementary and their daily lives are evident in every look, gesture and expression. Light penetrates the tram and falls on people as if it was a lightning of hope in the every day's darkness. I can feel the rhythm of life and the effect of external pressures on them. With each one present, I also feel the intensity of their day. With each passenger, being there, entering or getting off the tram, a story comes and another goes. Life is live stream. As people wonder about their fate and going to their destination, my question remains: "How long will this box endure the outside world changes?"

Fatma underlines how hard it is to be a photographer, moreover female, in an one eyed society where things are perceived through a single perspective and where the camera is seen as the big brother. Despite violence and discrimination which represent the tough reality of the contest Fatma's documented, she amplifies in her narrative also those moments of the daily life, where people express identity and dignity.
